Dr. Sharon Horowitz
Founder
CENTERNORTH Inc.

Dr. Sharon Horowitz, Founder of CENTERNORTH Inc. is an executive coach and organizational development consultant to CEOs, Managing Directors, and Technology and Scientific Experts. Combining a background in psychology and organizational experience, she provides insight into the people side of achieving business success. Her specific expertise is on working with highly analytical and technical people to achieve greater leadership visibility and impact. She incorporates theories of adult development and strength based assessments into her practice. She is skilled at engaging people according to their unique learning style in order to bring about their desired professional and organizational aspirations.

Sharon is also an expert in small and large group behavior and provides strategic planning, executive team alignment and staffing models for companies at all stages of their growth cycle.

Sharon is a clinical instructor at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine. She is an associate faculty member at the Tavistock Consultation Service in London, England. She is a contributing author to the book, Working Beneath the Surface, The Emotional Life of Contemporary Organizations, edited by the Tavistock Consultancy Service, based on her work in the financial services sector. She is a frequent conference speaker, most recently speaking at the Forbes Family Business Forum on crisis management and at the IT Technology Council on talent retention.

Sharon has served as an adjunct faculty member at Columbia Business School, held appointments at Cornell Medical Center and Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, where she published research articles in peer-reviewed journals.
